While the bicycle may not enjoy the abnormal popularity which was lavished upon it two years ago, the steed of steel still arouses a marked interest and an enthusiasm unusual to be extracted from an inanimate object. In the task of mastering the oldingh wheel the would be conquerer often credited the machine with possessing the germ of life. Its less difficult successor proved more tractable, and therein followed the cause for the universal use of the bleyche that now appertains.

The exhibition in Madison Square Garden, while not as elaborate, perhaps, as the shows of the past, presents a spectacle plensing and satisfying to those who are not inclined to be hypercritical. All the established concerns, with few exceptions, are represented, and the prospective rider and the veteran who is contemporating a new interest of the capital stock, has thus far succeeded in blocking the capital stock, has thu While the blcycle may not enjoy the ab- New Orleans, Jan. 23 .- It begins to look
